Philippa Gerbic
Auckland University of Technology

Philippa Gerbic works at the Auckland University of Technology, New Zealand where she teaches in undergraduate and postgraduate programmes in adult learning and teacher education. Her research interests include blended environments, the development of online and flexible learning, computer mediated communication, online learning design and student perspectives on learning. More recently, she has worked with the implementation of an e-portfolio and is currently investigating the role of e-portfolios within a lifelong learning framework, and issues regarding their placement within blended environments.