Professor Tom Cochrane
Deputy Vice-Chancellor (Technology, Information and Learning Support), QUT

Professor Tom Cochrane is Deputy Vice-Chancellor (Technology, Information and Learning Support) at QUT. Structurally the position heads a Division which includes all IT, library and teaching and learning support services for the University. He serves ex-officio on all the academic governance committees of the University including Academic Board, and its Research and Innovation, and Teaching and Learning Committees.

Currently Chair of QUT’s ePortfolio Reference group, Professor Cochrane has been the QUT Student ePortfolio Project Sponsor since 2002, when he was a key proponent of the development of a tool to support the integration of student experience.

Project role and commitment:
Professor Cochrane’s role within the QUT Student ePortfolio Project team draws on his expertise in championing the use of technology to improve student learning, and in advancing the University’s teaching and learning initiatives and support services. As Chair of the project’s steering committee, Professor Cochrane’s commitment will be as and when required. This is estimated to be 20 to 30 hours for the duration of the project.
