Professor David Gardiner
Deputy Vice-Chancellor (Academic), QUT

Professor David Gardiner is Deputy Vice-Chancellor (Academic) at QUT. Professor Gardiner has had, and retains, a strong and active involvement in the scholarship of teaching. He was appointed to the Carrick Institute Standing Committee on Leadership for Excellence in Learning and Teaching in Higher Education in 2006. He chairs QUT’s International Reference Group for Europe and the Americas and has knowledge of comparative activities in these jurisdictions. He is a member of the Steering Committee for the consortium that is undertaking the DEST commissioned project Developing a National Diploma Supplement and participated as a presenter at its invitational national workshop held in Melbourne on 3 May 2007.

Project role and commitment:
Professor Gardiner’s role in the Project will be to bring to it a sector-wide senior management perspective and to ensure that its direction and approach is consistent with developments in the National Diploma Supplement arena. Professor Gardiner will provide high-level strategic and timely input as he monitors national developments in the university sector over the coming months and suggests strategy, focus and intersections for the Project.
